

B i o g r a p h y

GLENN WASSON

Glenn Wasson was once the editor of AIR UNIVERSITY REVIEW (Professional Journal of the USAF) and of DEFENSE ELECTRONICS (technical periodical published in Palo Alto). Wasson, better known in the local area for his bawdy renditions of Black Bart doggerel and his historical tales, has previously published in The Reader's Digest, The Christian Science Monitor, Country Magazine, Soldier of Fortune, San Francisco Chronicle, Defense Electronics, The Retired Officer Magazine, Gem and Mineral, and a variety of regional and local publications. Wasson's current book is a revised and enlarged edition of Tales Mark Twain Would Have Loved To Steal, which was previously awarded the Gold Medal Award for non-fiction humor by the Readers Favorite contest. The book is available as an ebook or print book from Amazon.com or as a print edition from Small Press Distribution. Copies are also available in various outlets in the Mother Lode, including Treats Market, Calaveras Arts Council, Historical Courthouse, all in San Andreas. Other outlets include book stores throughout the Mother Lode, including Ironstone Vineyards.