Thursday, May 11 • 7 pm

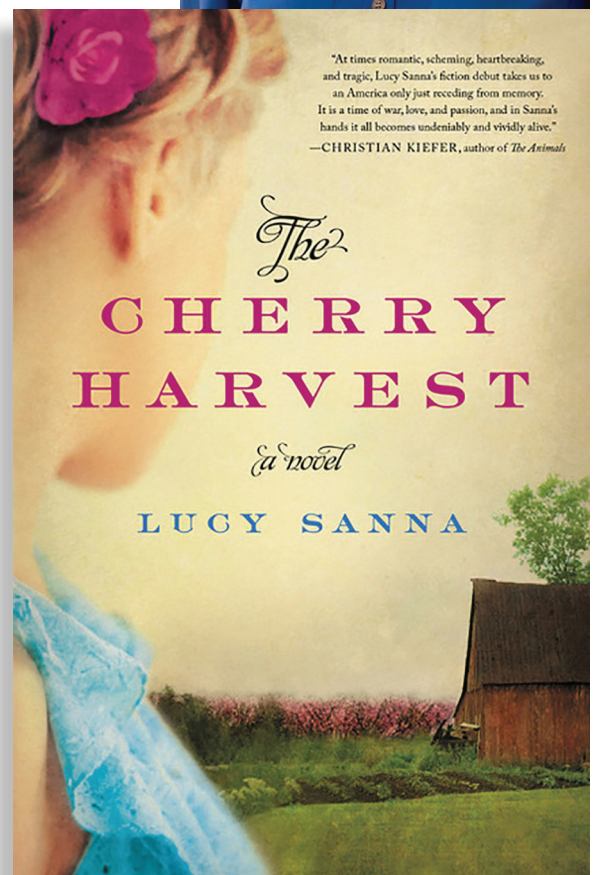

Enjoy a FREE evening with author Lucy Sanna who will speak about her novel's historical setting, the 1940s WWII era in the US, when German prisoners of war worked the cherry orchards and the drama one family experiences as a result.

Lucy Sanna, author of both fiction and nonfiction, has found success in venues ranging from poetry and short stories to feature science articles and self-help books. With an education in English literature, a nose for research, and a passion for sensual detail, Lucy easily moves through time, place, and voice, bringing both creative fancy and authenticity to her work.

Her debut novel, The Cherry Harvest (William Morrow) launched in June 2015. Other books by Lucy Sanna are How to Romance the Woman You Love and How to Romance the Man You Love.

Lucy has been featured on national television and radio, including CBS, NBC, NPR, and FOX, and her books have been recognized by national press, including the Los Angeles Times, the San Francisco Examiner, The Wisconsin State Journal, The San Jose Mercury News, Playboy Magazine, and Men's World Magazine, to name a few.
