The gift of a chocolate truffle or a red rose is what people think of when it is Valentine's Day.

This year, make the day especially memorable with a poem written exclusively for one's heartthrob.

Join Suzanne Murphy in a poetry writing workshop that will inspire participants to try several approaches to writing with romance in mind, as well as looking at poetry forms that have melted more than one heart.

Finding just the right words to convey feelings will result in a personal gift that can be enjoyed long after the chocolates and roses, delightful though they may be, are gone. All are welcome, including those who have written verses or are intrigued with the idea of crafting a little "sweet for your sweetie." Participants can open their senses and bring pleasure to writing poetry, as well as smiles and laughter.

Participants should come with laptops or notebooks to begin writing their own poems.

The morning workshop will be a place to relax and enjoy the company of people who want to create something beautiful for their very important person.

Please visit manzapress.com to reserve a spot, or call the Emporium at 209-728-6171 or 209-768-9021

Notification of workshop cancellation will occur if there is not a minimum of required participants registered.
